Such a wide variety may be due to the wide variety of desired fashion effects, and personal tastes and preferences. Increasingly, motorcycle helmets have become very popular because they provide a great measure of safety in the motorcycle riding environment. Yet, while the demand for a wide variety of unique and distinctive appearance motorcycle helmets has increased, the availability of such helmets has not kept pace. Because of the premium prices that such helmets command, purchasers of such helmets are deterred from purchasing the different types of motorcycle helmets merely because of their ability to potentially increase the price of their motorcycle purchase. The appearance of a motorcycle helmet is often considered to be part of the overall look and style of the motorcycle. This often results in the motorcycle purchaser having to choose among a smaller number of available motorcycle helmets because they do not have enough of a budget for a particular type of motorcycle helmet that they might desire. This concern is even greater when one considers the fact that the motorcycle helmet must fit snugly on the head of the wearer. Inherent in a highly snug fit is a virtually unbreakable and a life-like fit to the wearer. One possible solution to this dilemma would be to simply make a single motorcycle helmet out of a single material. This would provide a limitation in its ability to provide the wide variety of styles available with a wide number of materials. Even though one particular motorcycle helmet might be produced of a single material, it would be necessary that the helmet be assembled from a large number of discrete pieces that would be visually unattractive and difficult to assemble. Another possible solution would be to simply provide a number of motorcycle helmets with a selection of a relatively small number of different materials. However, this is not a satisfactory solution because of the number of motorcycle helmets that would have to be stocked. At least one motorcycle helmet with each of the necessary materials would need to be stocked. Thus, it would be necessary to stock a very large number of motorcycle helmets to provide a full range of different motorcycle helmet configurations. Moreover, such a solution would only address the appearance of the motorcycle helmet and would not address all concerns of a wide variety of styles and colors of motorcycle clothing. In addition, the basic motorcycle helmet would still provide a tough and durable single item which would
